

()

nouby @yahoo.com

Abstract:

This research intends to identify; the time period of retaining information by students after receiving it, what is the reason making students unable to application the information of architectural theories in architectural designing, and finally check what type of information is suitable to demonstrate the courses of architectural theories?

The research will be carried out by conducting an applied study analysis on a sample of students enrolled at different courses of Theories of Architecture; theory and .

The results of this research are; the information doesn't remain in the students memory for a long time, and the types of information appropriate to students' learning are; first figures and pictures, second visual statements, and third verbal statements.

:

(-)
()

() ()

:

- - -

) : (- .[]

) (-

:" " -
[]
()

.[] " " -

) (

] : " " .[- : -

() [] %

() () % %

() Recall ()] [

[]

:

:

-

-

:

-

- -

()

()

)

(

:

-

- -

-

() ()
() ()
:

() ()

% % % %

() ()

% % % %

()
%

() ()
() ()
:

() ()

% % % %

() ()

% % % %

() : - -

(-)

()

()

()

() ()

:

()

()

()

% % %

()

()

()

% % %

()

()

()

()

[]

[]

[]

Ross, M. F., Beyond Metabolism []
(The New Japanese Architecture)"
Architectural Record Books, Mc
Graw-Hill Book Company, New York,

[]

[]

[]

[]