

Towards a Better Understanding of the IT Program at a Female Saudi University

Hend S. Al-Khalifa
Information Technology
Department
College of Computer
and Information Sciences
King Saud University
Riyadh, Saudi Arabia
hend@ccis.edu.sa

Nadia M. Al- Ghreimil
Information Technology
Department
College of Computer
and Information Sciences
King Saud University
Riyadh, Saudi Arabia
alghreimil@ccis.edu.sa

Maha M. Al-Yahya
Information Technology
Department
College of Computer
and Information Sciences
King Saud University
Riyadh, Saudi Arabia
malyahya@ccis.edu.sa

ABSTRACT

Four years ago the College of Computer and Information Sciences at King Saud University started the development of a new Bachelor of Science degree majoring in Information Technology for female students. As the program is now in its second year of application, this paper presents the current program implementation, a comparison of its curriculum against national and international programs and the compliance of the current program with international standards.

Categories and Subject Descriptors

K.3 [COMPUTERS AND EDUCATION]

Computer and Information Science Education – Curriculum, Information Technology Education.

General Terms

Design, Economics, Human Factors, Standardization.

Keywords: Information Technology, IT curriculum

Development, Information Technology Education.