

Regional Modeling as an Approach to Strategic Planning of Egypt in the 21st Century

Regional modeling derived from the characterized concept of Egypt region is a new organic and qualitative approach introduced in this research .Through detailed scanning of ecological features of the region, the research tries to infer the vocabulary, mood, and behavior that formed the specific personality of the region. It concludes with a definition of the proposed axial modeling as an approach to strategic planning of Egypt in the 21st century.

Key Words: Geometric and Organic Modeling, Regional Behavior, Axial or Corridor Development.