

Clinical Therapeutics (CMED 301)

(1 + 0)

Course Content

This course is taught to third year students. The course is of clinical nature and aids students to update their knowledge. The course also promotes the students skills in scientific writing and research methodology. CMED 301 is (1 credit hour), its method of instruction differs from the other courses. It is taught to the students during their clinical rotations. It concentrates on teaching the students methods of scientific writing, literature reviewing and on how students may present orally their selected presentations. Topics include the clinical pharmacology and therapeutics of the drugs used in the treatment of the most prevalent diseases.